The film portrays Fluxus-artist, system fighter and project genius Knud Pedersen. Pedersen's artistic work consists of challenging in a humorous and yet dead-serious way the establishment, be it the Queen, the government, NATO, or conforming codes of conduct. For instance, when Pedersen in one of his projects apply for the job as General Secretary of NATO: "Your excellency, I am 83 years old, and have spent a large part of my life on different things, without ever succeeding to kill anyone. I am willing to meet new challenges though." And behind all these projects lies a story that goes back to World War II, when Pedersen was imprisoned by the Danish State because of his relation with the resistance movement, The Churchill Group.
